

8th June - 10th June 2022

Call for Abstracts

The Doctoral Researchers Group (DRG) and Strathclyde Doctoral School (SDS) are pleased to announce that DSMS is back for its 4th year and will take place from 8th-10th June 2022.

This event aims to gather all doctoral students together from the various groups, departments, and faculties across the whole university, giving you all the opportunity to showcase your research topic by presenting to a diverse audience whilst widening your academic networks and broadening your skillsets.

We are very excited to be holding the conference in person in the new Teaching and Learning Building whilst still offering you the chance to present via Zoom if you are unable to attend campus.

We will again have prizes for both the best poster and the best abstract! All PGRs are encouraged to submit.

The University final of the Three Minute Thesis (3MT) competition will also be taking place during the symposium. Anyone interested in 3MT[®] can register their interest via researcher.development@strath.ac.uk.

A Changing World

This year we will be thinking about 'A Changing World' and have defined the following three subthemes:

- 1- Changing People
- 2 - Changing Technology
- 3- Changing Planet

All PGRs are encouraged to submit an abstract regardless of your year of study. Whether you are already a published author or just planning out your research there is space for you here!
